

Office of the Superintendent
United States Military Academy
West Point, New York

12 September 1947

Dear Admiral Hillenkoetter:

In blocking out the instruction to be given the graduating class at West Point, I am most anxious to have an adequate presentation made of the importance of high level intelligence to national defense. Naturally, I think of you as the officer best qualified to develop this very important topic, and turn to you for assistance.

Would you consider an invitation to address this class during the latter half of November on the general subject of the intelligence requirements of national defense and the work of the Central Intelligence Agency? Any day in the period Monday to Thursday, inclusive, of the last two weeks of November would be entirely suitable from our point of view. The hour of these First Class lectures is 7:05 p.m., in a comparatively small lecture room capable of accommodating readily the 300 odd members of the class.

I am most hopeful that you can accept this cordial invitation, as your appearance on our lecture platform will mean much to the graduating class.

Sincerely yours,

/s/ Maxwell D. Taylor
